

Nicole Smith is the Economic Development Coordinator for the City of Manassas. Since joining the City in January 2016, she is primarily focused on marketing Manassas as a great place to do business and growing the City's business retention and expansion program. Nicole has more than 13 years of experience in the greater Washington region and most recently served as the Economic Development Director for the City of Fairfax. Prior to that she led the government relations and member services program for the Metropolitan Washington Council of Governments.

Nicole holds a Master of Public Policy degree from George Mason University, an undergraduate degree in Political Science from Virginia Commonwealth University and is an accredited Certified Economic Developer (CEd) professional by the International Economic Development Council. She is also a graduate of Leadership Prince William's Class of 2017, Lead by Xample and the Executive Leadership Institute for Greater Washington.